

Dear Parishioners,

+JMJ

I have wanted since my arrival to communicate something about Communion services. Before my arrival, Communion services were a regular occurrence in our parish. After I arrived they stopped. Why not Communion services?

In the post-Vatican II years, with the decline in the number of priests, but moreso – by my observation in parishes I have experienced – because of a desire to get lay people and sisters to do more clerical things, Communion services became the answer to almost any desire parishioners had to have an occasion of prayer. Instead of having just a liturgy of the Word of some sort, distribution of Communion was added. Communion services certainly became common as a way to fill in for the lack of a Mass on a day the pastor would be away. In many parishes, for example, a Monday Communion service became the norm, since pastors often take Monday off at the end of always-busy weekends. Or if the pastor would be gone during the weekdays for his canonical five-day retreat, the parish would schedule Communion services.

The Church guidelines allowing Communion services was really meant to meet the need of those places where access to Communion otherwise would be very rare. Regularly scheduled Sunday Masses are not even available in some places. In a situation like ours, with four Sunday Masses each weekend, and then four more – at least – during the week, there really is no argument for a Communion service. Weekday Masses are not an obligation (although it is a fine practice to attend Mass on weekdays if you are able.) Imagine missionary situations, for example, where the priest is not able to visit a village for six months; so a catechist gets trained to teach doctrine and lead weekend or monthly Communion services with consecrated Hosts carried from the nearest city. Or there might be the rare Sunday where a priest suddenly gets sick, and no substitute can be found in time. If there are Hosts in the tabernacle, a deacon or layperson could lead a Communion service, since the whole parish arrived to fulfill their Sunday obligation.

To treat the reserved Hosts so casually, however, that we plan regularly scheduled Communion services, when people have weekend Masses in abundance available to them, is perhaps not to appreciate fully enough the Mass. The Mass is where the miracle of Transubstantiation happens. No Communion service can compare to this awesome wonder!

Also, I wonder if making the Hosts in the tabernacle so casually available outside of Mass masks a necessary spiritual suffering in our times – allowing ourselves to feel the pain from the lack of priestly vocations. We ought to experience a longing for more priests as part of our longing for the Eucharist. I have a hunch that ready access to Hosts in the tabernacle for casual Communion services over the last number of decades has led some people to think “we can get by without so many priests”. In fact, I have heard this explicitly stated. On the contrary, however, we ought to feel the discomfort of not having the Eucharist available to us at every turn, since the reality is that we do not have enough priests. Are we on our knees enough about our need for priestly vocations? Are we raising our sons seriously to ask the Lord if priesthood is their call? Are we cultivating a holy family culture that will lead a young man to ask about priesthood? How much do we really believe in the world's need for the Eucharist?

When I realized the parish was used to Communion services, I spoke with Monsignor Charles Singler, leader of the Diocesan Worship Office, who sent me the attached article he wrote on Communion services. He told me I could publish it in my bulletin. I hope it is enlightening.

Have a blessed week!

In cordibus Iesu et Marie,
Fr. Poggemeyer

Differences Exist between Mass and Holy Communion Services

About 20 years ago, I remember one of the members of the parish where I was serving at the time make the observation that she had attended one of those “new Masses”. I was not exactly sure what she meant by “new Mass,” so I asked the obvious question, “Which Mass did you mean?”

The response came back, “You know, Father, that short version of Mass when a lay person can play the part of the priest and do everything except change the bread and wine into the Body and Blood of Christ.” She went on, “I really like that type of Mass because it is short and we don’t have to listen to all those prayers.”

It immediately dawned on me that this woman was referring to a Communion service.

Clearly, there are some points to consider regarding Communion services. First, they are not intended to take the place of Mass, nor are they intended to parallel, in any way, the action and purpose of the Mass. While there has been an increase in their usage over the past 25 years, we need to consider the fact that there is something to be said about the gift of the Eucharist and the opportunity the Catholic faithful have in celebrating the Mass.

First and foremost, the Mass is our premier expression of public worship and prayer in the Catholic Church. This tradition has been held from the time of the apostles and remains so to this very day. It is the reason why we gather on the Lord’s Day and provides the gathering point for the people of God to offer prayer and praise to the Father of all creation.

The celebration of Communion services has a specific purpose and aid: to provide spiritual nourishment for those who would otherwise not be able to participate at Mass for a long time and, in particular, on Sunday, the “weekly Easter”.

Communion services are not a “stop-gap measure” for the convenience of the people of God, nor are they arranged because they might add a little more solemnity to a prayer service. Furthermore, they are not celebrated because of a personal whim or desire on the part of the one who ministers, but must emerge out of genuine pastoral necessity.

The permission granted in promoting the use of this prayer comes from a serious pastoral need when the faithful are not able to attend Mass due to the absence of a priest. So serious is this permission that it is left to the diocesan bishop to regulate when and where such services can be celebrated in the diocese.

In recent time, conversations regarding Communion services, nationally and internationally, have cautioned the Catholic faithful to appreciate the gift of the holy Eucharist and to understand that the baptized members of the church have a right to the celebration of Mass. While there may be legitimate places and circumstances where the proper pastoral response might be to schedule a Communion service, we need to hold close to heart and soul the mystery of God’s sacrificial love for us in Jesus Christ. Each time we celebrate the Mass, this reality is offered to us. No other prayer does that so clearly and succinctly.

Reverend Monsignor Charles Singler
Director of the Office of Divine Worship for the Catholic Diocese of Toledo in America.

WHAT IS THE “DIVINE MERCY IMAGE”? WHY DO WE VENERATE IT?

Sister Faustina, now Saint Faustina, back in the 1930s had the Lord appear to her in a vision. She saw Jesus clothed in a white garment with His right hand raised in blessing. His left hand was touching His garment in the area of the Heart, from where two large rays came forth, one red and the other pale. Jesus said to her: “Paint an image according to the pattern you see, with the signature: Jesus, I Trust in You. I promise that the soul that will venerate this image will not perish. I also promise victory over (its) enemies already here on earth, especially at the hour of death. I Myself will defend it as My own glory. (Diary, 47, 48) I am offering people a vessel with which they are to keep coming for graces to the fountain of mercy. That vessel is this image with the signature: Jesus, I Trust in You. (Diary, 327) I desire that this image be venerated, first in your chapel, and (then) throughout the world. (Diary, 47)

The two rays denote Blood and Water. The pale ray stands for the Water which makes souls righteous. The red ray stands for the Blood which is the life of souls. These two rays issued forth from the depths of My tender mercy when My agonized Heart was opened by a lance on the Cross. Happy is the one who will dwell in their shelter, for the just hand of God shall not lay hold of him. (Diary, 299) By means of this image I shall grant many graces to souls. It is to be a reminder of the demands of My mercy, because even the strongest faith is of no avail without works. (Diary, 742)
